

CONSTITUTION UNIT, FOI, FOI requests, House of Commons, the Commons, Parliamentary Affairs, parliamentarians, FOI Act, London, FOI request, Daily Telegraph, opposition members, Freedom of Information, United Kingdom Central Government, Freedom of Information Act 2000, Parliamentary Reform, House of Lords, Freedom of Information Act, Canada, Political Quarterly, system, travel expenses, Access to Information Act, Official Information Act, Management Board, parliamentary estate, Maclean Bill, Parliamentary Standards Act 2009, Public Administration, Freedom of Information Request, Public Administration Select Committee, Houses of Parliament, Freedom of Information Bill, Information Commissioner's Office, Central Government, Information Commissioner of Canada, Michael Trend MP, parliamentary opposition, Information Commissioner, Nancy Pelosi, local government level, leader of the House of Commons, Martin Bell MP, government, Australia and New Zealand, expenses, House of Commons Commission, Parliamentary Business, Leader of the House of Lords, information security policies, FOI legislation, Canadian MPs, information requests

The use of FOI by Parliamentarians and the Impact of FOI on Parliament