Neonatal Intensive Care, infants, premature infants, NICU, low-birth-weight infants, development, Louis Gluck, preterm infants, United States, birth weight, NICHD, term infants, Julius Hess, intensive care units, Mitzi Duxbury, Mitzi Duxbury Reduction, premature babies, Lula Lubchenco, weight gain, studies, newborn care, indirect bilirubin, assisted ventilation, pressure ventilators, direct bilirubin, Rosemary White Traul, premature infant, Dr. Duxbury, Maternal Role Ramona Mercer, neonatal mortality, College of Nursing, Maternal-Fetal Medicine Network, infant mortality rate, clinical care, American Medical Association, low birth weight, neonatal mortality rate, colonization, Charles A. Dana, premature labor, Innovative therapy, Ross Laboratories, Duane Alexander, Washington, DC, research center, intrauterine growth retardation, Crippled Children’s Service Research Grants Program, National Institute of Allergy, program project grants, Washington The care of premature infants: Historical perspective