Iraq, communications, counterinsurgency, communication, London, population, United States, political compromise, Penguin-Books, audience, Alberto Fernandez, State Department, audiences, Department of the Army, persuasive message, Coalition forces in Iraq, Headquarters Department of the Army, target population, representative government, RAND National Defense Research Institute, Robert Thompson, Iraq population, Frank Miller, The Audience, Andrew Keen, YouTube, Russell W. Glenn, Parameters, strategy and tactics, niche audiences, divergent interests, military success, information superiority, communication effort, communication efforts, effective communication, American forces, Richard Dannatt, military force in Iraq, Frederick A. Praeger, Al Jazeera, communication strategy, Lincoln Group, Coalition Provisional Authority, Ernesto Guevara

Waging communication war