persistent diarrhoea, India, comparison group, Brazil, Bangladesh, developing countries, pathogen, EPEC, acute diarrhoea, northeastern Brazil, ETEC, Escherichia coli, J Infect Dis, prospective cohort study, diarrhoea, Sample Mean, cases, relevant studies, persistent diarrhoea, Western Pacific, risk factors, comparison, South-East Asia, the Americas, comparison-groups, descriptive studies, observational studies, Schorling JR, Tripodi S, Cryptosporidiosis, Caribbean Health Sciences Literature, control children, geographical patterns, Antimicrobial susceptibility testing, collected data, Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine, healthy children, Schorling, J. B., diarrhoea deaths, included studies, Brudzi 2005, Echenvele, P., Bangladeshi children, study period, study reports, data collection, J Pediatr Gastroenterol Nutr, study results, J Com Dis, Enteropatho E coli, World Health Organization, Cambodian children, Nataro, J. P.

Pathogens associated with persistent diarrhoea in children in developing countries: Systematic review of observational studies [final draft]