women writers, integration propaganda, the Civil War, dominant ideology, Twayne World Authors Series, Spain, women novelists, La trampa, Quiros, La canela, secondary, Malcolm Alan, Catherine G. James, War, Arden Press, La guerra, Modern Language Association Convention, El impacto de la guerra, Argos Vargas, Twayne Publishers, New York, Johns Hopkins University Press, Contemporary Literature, A. P. Litterature, The Spanish Civil War, La guerra civil, Concha Espina, Indiana University Press, Margaret E. W. Doherty McDo, Constanza Gueca, Ohio State University, la novela, la democracia, Spanish novel, Republican perspective, Franco Spain, Carolyn Galenstein, Queen Isabel, Matute, Luis Garcia-i, la Beranga, State University, Civil War fiction, Malcom Alan Conaplaito, young women, women writer, Even Matute, Spanish women writers, integration, Marina Mayoral, Carmen Gómez, political figures, Monterial Ring, Concha Castroviejo, young women writers, Letras Femeninas
The Civil War in the Spanish Novel: Female Perspectives